

Class of 2020 Convocation Honors

The faculty of the Department of Nutritional Sciences wishes to congratulate all of its seniors who graduated in Spring 2020, but would especially like to commend the following students who were honored at the SEBS convocation in May for their achievements:

Graduating Cum Laude (GPA 3.5-3.69):

Ashley A. Bialoblocki, Rhiannon B. Campagna, Jessica L. Carr, Fahad A. Chaudhri, Natalie M. Migliore, Bansari H. Patel, Emily M. Patten, Angelica A. Pozzoli, Kimberly Y. Quisadobarato

Graduating Magna Cum Laude (GPA 3.7-3.84):

Haley E. DeSimone, Dana M. Ikeda, Amanda Liyanaarachchi

Graduating Summa Cum Laude (GPA 3.85-4.00):

Grace H. Chang, Megan E. Czirok, Sarah L. Davis, Amanda T. Lee, George Pan, Helen M. Pierce, Hannah R. Posluszny, Charles G. Vickers

Graduating with departmental awards:

Megan E. Czirok, Barbara L. Tangel Outstanding Dietitian Award

Natalie M. Migliore, Robert Francis & Annetta Morey Wagner Memorial Prize (Douglass Residential College)

Helen M. Pierce, Sylvia Blacher Karger Memorial Prize (Douglass Residential College)

Hannah R. Posluszny, Award for Outstanding Achievement in Nutritional Sciences

Angelica A. Pozzoli, Ann S. McChesney Nutrition Education Award

Graduating with George H. Cook Honors; Thesis title (Faculty advisor):

Grace H. Chang; Evaluating sensory food characteristics of value-added products among New Brunswick community farmers market customers (Dr. Virginia Quick)

Amanda T. Lee; Metabolic effects of alternate day sulfur amino acid restriction in mice (Dr. Tracy Anthony)

Bansari H. Patel; Regulation of glutamine metabolism in lactation (Dr. Malcolm Watford)

Hannah R. Posluszny; The mother-daughter relationship and weight related behaviors (Dr. John Worobey)

The Department is especially proud of Hannah Posluszny, who having completed all of her coursework at Rutgers University, graduated with a final GPA of 4.00, and was named as one of six SEBS valedictorians. Hannah will be attending Johns Hopkins University in the fall to begin a joint Master's degree and Dietetics internship program. We wish Hannah, and all our graduating seniors, the very best for a happy and successful future!